Gaming. Technology is evolving in society now that you do not need to wait for a visible partner (such as a family member or friend) to participate. Today, a gamer can find another participant online via the computer whenever ready to play. This access for people that are gaming absorbs their time so much that it is stealing from others. Relationships between a gamer's family, friends, neighbours, and God are secondary. The world of gaming for gamers is now their priority.

For believers, we can find ourselves trapped in this world. Every activity can become addictive. Our eyes are the entrance to our minds that could be polluted over time if we do not balance or minimize the length in this area.

At home, the condition may be severe when a believer gaming isolates himself from others frequently and engaging with them sparingly. This mode may lead the believer to become slack in responsibilities as a family member or person in general. The most area of responsibility for a believer gaming at this point is to the universal family online.

Prayer: Dear God, help me to not let this activity get in the way of knowing you. Thank you God.
