A test academically is a time-sensitive examination to determine the individual's capability of knowledge for that subject can pass or fail. For a believer, a life test is an urgent personal matter that requires attention: trusting God to overcome without a sense of luring toward evil.

The believer will have these occurrences but should depend upon God to intervene and direct them spiritually throughout the period. The problem with over thinking about a current negative situation is that it could be so physically draining. Instead of being confident that things will work out, many people are already thinking about the worst-case scenario. Constant thought over the circumstance is to worry, and this condition never solves any problems but only adds more.

If we trust what our eyes see (that opens up these thoughts), then chances are we might not get through it. The objective is to see our way out of it, not see our way of staying in it. The old saying, "there are more ways to interpret a painting," then we, as believers, need to picture ourselves passing the test.

What we see concludes with what we might say. Eyes and mouth work together in harmony. Did you know, out of our five senses, the eyes and mouth interact with each other the most? When we see something, we say something.

People in general trust their instincts, believers, trust in God. To Pass the test hinges on our dependence on Him. That is the difference between passing or failing.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, guide me through this test. Help me forgive those who I may encounter during the process. Amen.
