Generation is a body of people living collectively together at about the same time within a society. This community includes a combination of relatives, friends, neighbors, associates, and even enemies. A person living among their community will have an impact on them or vice versa. How will they or you affect your generation? There are several categories: parents and family, political landscape, personal technology, education, public media, social environment, and work culture.

Generation starts with genes. God made every human being within themselves that contain DNA (Deoxyribonucleic acid) at birth from their parents that carry the characteristics that will develop over the lifespan of that individual.

A person in their generation is a product of the country where they are born.

Depending on the current state of things, this may affect their learning development and future decision-making. Another area for a human is physical traits. Each human being during infancy receives some parental gifts that will manifest as they mature.

Generation includes education. Each human encounters learning at an early stage which is an opportunity with parental guidance to develop by attending school. During this time, the person will confront public attention from peers and others alike which they eventually learn how to manage themselves.

Generation includes social media. Either the individual will have a strong interest in paying attention to others or things that surround them or vice versa.

A person in their generation will have an idea of a career or line of work based on their family environment or learning achievements.

Generation includes legacy. A person within their relatives, friends, associates may benefit from receiving assets or financial benefits that would aid in their enhancement.

A generation is people making the most of their opportunities. Whatever surrounds us that will improve our lives and we have permission to access it, take advantage of it.

Generation is socializing. We never know the people around us. There might be someone within our lives that may positively catapult us to the next level. God inspires us to be better today than yesterday. The obligation to interact with our generation.
