

Outer Growth - Time

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

Genesis 8:22

Turn - Job 17:12

Irreversible - Psalms 103:16

Measured - Genesis 1:14

Existence - Galatians 4:10

Time is the only thing in our lives that we are unable to pause or get back. This continual measure of the period is progressive and steadfast that affects the past, arrives in the present, moves toward the future.

The interesting thing about time is that it's unpredictable. God made time in such a unique way that when the night changes into day, the next exact moment it might arrive at a different period. For example, if the transition of day to night occurs at seven hours, four minutes, and three seconds, the following day for that specific time will be slightly off. The important point about time and people is it moves with us and keeps moving when we are not.

Time is not like people because it always remains positive and keeps moving forward. The old saying, "here one minute and gone the next." Therefore, if we plan to do something for ourselves at a particular time, we should make the most of it because there will be no opportunity for that moment in time again.

The Son of God knows the time and responded to His disciples, "Are there not twelve hours in the day?" We know that time moves by a second to create a minute, minutes form an hour, and hours turn to days, etcetera. However, there is a day missing in history. This assessment confirmed by scientists that found the day missing traced it back to the Bible. Time moves, and we move time.
